As we expected, our article criticising the feature of our law which condenses the feature of our law which condemns a man guilty of number to death, created considerail tilk and controversy. Min argied it a cording to their passions or the influent of per and feelings. The most intelligent members of the bar, we be most intelligent members of the bar, we be seen to be a less man in the Democratic or any party in this country. believe, colucide with our view, and rebelieve, coincide with our view, and regard the all lition of capital punishment as the first great step toward bringing criminals to justice. There is no doubt hundreds escape from the reluctance of furies to condemn even a guilty man to death. The instification that satisfies the law and society does not satisfy the juror. He hesitates, doubts, disbelieves. There is no such thing as a reasonable doubt in a marder case. Any doubt, however improbable; a doubt that would influence no man in an ordinary transaction, serves to excuse a verdict of not guilty. The criminals are at large, thrown upon society, and invited by impunity to repeat the offense. How many "dangerous men" are now at large in this State—men who have slain a fellow-creature and been acquitted by a jury, and who now walk the streets loaded down with arms! How many who, if they have not "killed their law in the lay of some of those retained, as recommended.

who, if they have not "killed their man," are ready to do so on the slightest provocation or no provocation, incited by the impunity of others! Do we not know that if a man was to walk into a merchant's counting-house to-day and shoot him down in celd blood, the criminal would escape? Why? Not because juries do not believe them guilty, but because in the detestation of bloodshed is included a refuctance to shed blood even under forms of law.

But hitherto we have regarded this simply as a question between the jury and the guilty. How much is the reluctance intensified when we remember how easy it is for the innocent to be involved in guilty circumstances—an appearance of guilt corroborated with evidence of time, place and circumstance. The books are full of it. Not a lawyer defends a crintinal, but he lays before the jury a long array of cases where the innocent have suffered by the fatal testimony of circumstances. Would you hang any man on circumstantial evidence? No! But every lawyer will tell you circumstantial evidence that could be advanced, and yet how easily mustaken!

A short time ago a dreadful case of murder occurred in this city. An old man was found shouted in short time ago a dreadful case of murder occurred in this city. An old man was found shouted and stained with blood. The lines were closing deperately around the victim, when, on

But suppose the fact of the hunting and explanation of the bloody spots had continued and explanation of the bloody spots had colored or black assumer; they are en of the man's gnilt? Could the jury, in the face of the double proofs, have failed in their verdict? and yet what an accident saved him? A chance witness could prove the fact of his having been a hunting and carried the birds in his pocket. The books are full of cases when the discovery was not made so soon; when the circumstances fellowed with dreadful dire mess to guilt; when witnesses tes ified to the blow and physicians to the cause of de the sees so strong reluctant juries were forced to a verdict, and the execution followed, and yet months or years five facts have been developed acquicing the man altogether; developed too late. TWO DESPERATE FIGHTS. All about the Contests.

By Telegraph to the Democrat.

DETROIT, Nov. 12.—To-day two battles were fought on Peach Island, the first between two young sprouts, Halloran, of Cleveland, and Broderick, of Chicago. They fought sixteen rounds in forty minutes, and then had to give way for the main attraction of the day. They fought for 85, and divided the spoils. Both were pretty badly punished.

The fight between Galfagher and Eliot was in the same ring, and was determined and brutal. It ended in a roughand-tumble encounter and a most unjust decision, if there is any rule known to

are in affairs.

Two boats, one containing the friends of Gallagher, the other those of Elliott, of hetroit fir the island at the head of the triver about 10 o'el sek this morning. Private boats also conveyed people of wilness the fight. Altogether there were shout 400 present. The weather was quie chilly. The ring was pitched on a wet, slippery locality. In the rowd there were many thieves, who obbed indiscriminately, and with some ewex, propose, those in attendance were shout the wars lot of criminals that ever went unlung.

oe. Perish, of Cleveland, umpired for lagher, and Dennis Monahau of Det, and Johnny Mackey, of Cleveland, anded. The same offices were respective performed for Elhott by Dan Leary, Proy. N. Y.: Han Brown, of New rk, and Tom Allen, of Cleveland. Oe Colbert, of Philad Iphia, was chorefore. He was throughout comically managed by the Elliott party, I by his unfur decisions gained used to the was upon either side. It is quite appeared to the would have been killed.
